keywords: cpa exam prep, cpa exam preparation, cpa preparation

There is no doubt about it; the CPA examination is one difficult cookie! Generally just 1/2 of the exam takers pass it and the other fifty percent fails it? That is the indisputable fact. This exam only has a 40 to 50 percent pass rate. Well, as frustrating as the statistic can be to those ambitious students who desire to pass, it does not just stop there since the examination preparation is as challenging as the actual test itself. But, don't worry, in this short article, five outstanding guidelines are introduced to assist you in making the most of your time in reviewing and preparation in order for you to be included among the handful of bright individuals who succeed in passing the CPA exam.

1. Improve Your Psychology

Be happy. Totally focus. Organize your thinking. Think as if you truly can easily do it all. Positive thinking and be able to recover are important mindsets for you to adopt. You have to approach this like a "glad warrior" of sorts. Be well prepared for battle. Face things with enthusiasm and passion. Envision yourself as a practicing CPA. Think of yourself as one who already passed the examination with flying colors. Be happy as you study. These good vibes will help you to gird up your mind with confidence and keep away pessimism as you go through your exam preparations.

2. Enroll in a Reputable CPA Review Program

It doesn't get much more important than this. Ignore this piece of advice at your own peril. Enrolling in a reputable CPA review program will not just offer you a great lecture about accounting but most probably direct you to the exam questions which are likely to show up in the test itself. This way, you have narrowed down what to study, disregarding the other not needed lessons to make full use of your time for only relevant knowledge. Make sure your review course has real student support, preferably in the form of telephone contact with the instructor or forum support. Talking to a mentor for your questions will even maximize your study time. Again, don't overlook the value of purchasing a great review course.

3. Stick to a Disciplined Schedule

This is also a rather significant aspect in passing the examination. If you truly desire to pass the CPA examination you have to entirely devote yourself to your studies. This really is not even close to being a test you just decide to cram for in just a weekend. You really should commit a bare minimal of 3 months to the steady study of both your textbook and review course. Three - four hours of extremely focused study on a daily basis is perfect. Furthermore, the four hour study period might be broken into two study sessions everyday - two hours throughout the day, respectively so as to not stress your mind so much. Do this study schedule 5 days per week for three - four months and you really should be in very good shape for gearing up to pass the exam notably. Choose the very best study agenda for you and stick to it with the very best self-discipline you've got.

4. Get Help And Support from Friends And Family

It is just as necessary as concentrating on your exam preparations that you let your friends and family know the significance of the exam. In other words, tell everybody you know precisely what it is that you are doing and how important it truly is to you. Seek for the full support of the individuals around you to ensure that you will be motivated to satisfy your goals. In fact, find the most self-disciplined person in the group and ask them to hold you accountable. They can encourage you to study whenever you might otherwise think it is alright to skip today's session. This kind of help and support is invaluable, and might be precisely what you need to stay on track and see this thing through to its exciting conclusion!

5. Keep Yourself In Good Health

You shouldn't just completely focus on your study routine but also on your regular daily exercise and wholesome diet as well to keep a fit and strong body. Possessing a strong and fit body can help you stabilize your emotions and concentrate more on your study sessions and goals. Having a fit body is the easiest way to a happy and intelligent mind of an individual. Don't just disregard the critical role of a healthful body on effective studying habits.

There are undoubtedly other important study ideas you'll want to implement. You might want to follow a different study guideline but the 5 included in this article is all of the help you need to accomplish your ambitions like no other. The way you study for your CPA examination is very important, but it all starts with the right mindset, preparation, help and support, and related study materials. Best of luck to you on becoming the world's newest certified public accountant!
